CAMELS CARRYING GROUNDNUTS TO A COLLECTING CENTER

"Checking in Cocoa"

The growth of Tropical Africa's prosperity rests, to a very large extent, upon her ability to sell her abundant natural produce to the world. In 1949 she disposed of over a million tons, and The United Africa Company performed a vital service in collecting a large share of this from thousands of small producers mainly on behalf of the Government Marketing Boards. It is characteristic of the African way of life that a large part of this huge total was contributed by the small producer — sometimes in lots of no more than twenty pounds weight at a time. To facilitate its collection The United Africa Company maintains no fewer than 1,700 buying points throughout the whole of British West Africa.
